$25M deal over Trump University fraud lawsuits moves forward	07/02/2018	Adverse Media	Summary: SAN FRANCISCO — Feb 6, 2018, 2:52 PM ET WatchTrump Agrees to Pay $25M to Settle Trump University Lawsuit A federal appeals court on Tuesday upheld an agreement requiring President Donald Trump to pay $25 million to settle lawsuits accusing his now-defunct Trump University of fraud. The two class-action lawsuits and a civil lawsuit by New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman followed Trump throughout the presidential campaign. Trump fueled the controversy by repeatedly insinuating that Curiel's Mexican heritage made him biased against Trump. Trump had vowed never to settle but said after the election that he didn't have time for a trial. In a statement Tuesday, Scheiderman said the 9th Circuit ruling "means that victims of Donald Trump's fraudulent university will soon receive the $25 million in relief they deserve." Keywords: lawsuits, lawsuit, fraud, fraudulent Original URL: http://abcnews.go.com/Politics/wireStory/25m-deal-trump-university-fraud-lawsuits-moves-forward-52882718

4 New Trump Corruption Stories From the Last Day Alone	01/02/2018	Adverse Media	Summary: Kennedy spoke eloquently about the Trump administration's divisive politics of turning Americans against each other, and the Democratic Party's commitment to social equality and economic security. What Kennedy did not mention, however, was the Trump administration's deep-rooted corruption, which is an odd omission, because there is quite a lot of it. Donald Trump is a grifter who paid a massive fraud settlement shortly before assuming office. He has surrounded himself with like-minded grifters. His former national security adviser, Michael Flynn, was secretly collecting payments from a foreign government while advising the Trump transition team. The self-dealing has never stopped. A report yesterday found that Trump's infrastructure council is filled with business owners who stand to benefit from the policies Trump is advancing. For instance, Richard LeFrak, one of the developers on Trump's council, has lobbied against flood-risk regulations that Trump has eliminated. The plan writ large would steer public funding toward privately owned infrastructure projects that would benefit the developers on Trump's committee, as well as potentially members of his own family. Meanwhile, the Palm Beach Post reports that Trump Realty is expanding its operations in southern Florida. The ongoing business by Trump's business empire is a massive corruption risk, as Trump and his family can benefit from the publicity conferred by his public office, and stand to benefit by anybody who wants to curry favor throwing business their way. One of Trump Realty's agents tells the Post that she "is confident the recent tax law will further spur relocations from high-tax states in the Northeast to South Florida." This was not an exposé of a reporter discovering that Trump stands to benefit from his tax law. It was a casual boast by the business's manager to a journalist. These stories are merely the news of the last 24 hours, a day in the life of self-dealing in the Trump administration. Trump's most politically potent message was his promise that he would no longer care about his own wealth. "My whole life I've been greedy, greedy, greedy," he would say. "I've grabbed all the money I could get. I'm so greedy. But now I want to be greedy for the United States." Trump was the outsider, the threat to entrenched elites, and an incorruptible man. There is obviously a lot to criticize in this administration. Trump's bigotry, ignorance, and obvious lack of fitness for office have inspired Democratic activists to... Keywords: fraud Original URL: http://nymag.com/daily/intelligencer/2018/01/4-new-trump-corruption-stories-from-the-last-day-alone.html
Widespread corruption allegations add to Trump World's troubles	09/10/2017	Adverse Media	Summary: On his way out, however, the scientist noted that there are laws in place to prevent this kind of mistreatment – laws that Donald Trump's cabinet secretary appears to have ignored. And that's just Trump's cabinet. There are also lower-profile controversies, such as Trump's indifference towards the Constitution's Emoluments Clause. Just yesterday ProPublica put a spotlight on allegations that two of Donald Trump's adult children – Ivanka and Donald Trump Jr. – were nearly indicted on felony fraud charges, before a district attorney intervened. The D.A. reportedly made the decision that helped the Trumps after meeting with Trump attorney Marc Kasowitz. Emails show Ivanka, Trump Jr. coordinating lies Trump SoHo It's possible some cynical political observers will see a list like this one and assume this is somehow normal – politics is a dirty business, where controversies are as common as the sunrise – but it's not. Keywords: fraud Original URL: http://www.msnbc.com/rachel-maddow-show/widespread-corruption-allegations-add-trump-worlds-troubles

Mueller Expands Probe to Trump Business Transactions	27/07/2017	Adverse Media	Summary: The U.S. special counsel investigating possible ties between the Donald Trump https://www.bloomberg.com/billionaires/id/1252249 campaign and Russia in last year's election is examining a broad range of transactions involving Trump's businesses as well as those of his associates, according to a person familiar with the probe. FBI investigators and others are looking at Russian purchases of apartments in Trump buildings, Trump's involvement in a controversial SoHo development in New York with Russian associates, the 2013 Miss Universe pageant in Moscow and Trump's sale of a Florida mansion to a Russian oligarch in 2008, the person said. The investigation also has absorbed a money-laundering probe begun by federal prosecutors in New York into Trump's former campaign chairman Paul Manafort. John Dowd, one of Trump's lawyers, said on Thursday that he was unaware of the inquiry into Trump's businesses by the two-months-old investigation and considered it beyond the scope of what Special Counsel Robert Mueller should be examining. "Those transactions are in my view well beyond the mandate of the Special counsel are unrelated to the election of 2016 or any alleged collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia and most importantly, are well beyond any Statute of Limitation imposed by the United States Code," he wrote in an email. But officials expressed concern about Trump's handling of sensitive information as well as his grasp of the potential consequences. "Trump seems to be very reckless and doesn't grasp the gravity of the things he's dealing with, especially when it comes to intelligence and national security. And it's all clouded because of this problem he has with Russia. " In his meeting with Lavrov, Trump seemed to be boasting about his inside knowledge of the looming threat. He did not reveal the specific intelligence-gathering method, but he described how the Islamic State was pursuing elements of a specific plot and how much harm such an attack could cause under varying circumstances. Trump also described measures the United States has taken or is contemplating to counter the threat, including military operations in Iraq and Syria, as well as other steps to tighten security, officials said. Trump cast the countermeasures in wistful terms. Senior White House officials appeared to recognize quickly that Trump had overstepped and moved to contain the potential fallout. One of Bossert's subordinates also called for the problematic portion of Trump's discussion to be stricken from internal memos and for the full transcript to be limited to a small circle of recipients, efforts to prevent sensitive details from being disseminated further or leaked. White House officials defended Trump. Trump has repeatedly gone off-script in his dealings with high-ranking foreign officials, most notably in his contentious introductory conversation with the Australian prime minister earlier this year. U.S. officials said that the National Security Council continues to prepare multi-page briefings for Trump to guide him through conversations with foreign leaders, but that he has insisted that the guidance be distilled to a single page of bullet points - and often ignores those. Lavrov's reaction to the Trump disclosures was muted, officials said, calling for the United States to work more closely with Moscow on fighting terrorism. Trump's first national security adviser, Michael Flynn, was forced to resign just 24 days into the job over his contacts with Kislyak and his misleading statements about them. "I'm sure Kislyak was able to fire off a good cable back to the Kremlin with... Keywords: terrorism Original URL: http://www.chicagotribune.com/news/nationworld/ct-trump-revealed-classified-information-russians-20170515-story.html

Kenneth F. McCallion: Trump real estate built on corruption	04/11/2016	Adverse Media, ID/V	Summary: Lost in all of the media hype over Donald Trump's mistreatment of women and Hillary Clinton's missing emails is the fact that Donald Trump's real estate empire is largely dependent on Russian and other foreign money, untold quantities of it laundered through his various real estate projects. This Russian money is a lifeblood of the Trump Organization, and if Russian billionaire oligarchs aligned with President Vladimir Putin were to suddenly pull their money out of the Trump Organization, it would exact a heavy financial toll on the enterprise. As Donald Trump Jr. bragged to a group of largely Russian and other foreign investors at a conference in 2008, Russian money was "pouring in" to the Trump Organization, and constituted "a pretty disproportionate cross-section of a lot of our assets." In the event that Trump were to actually occupy the White House as our next President, how could he "get tough" with the Russians, or consider signing stronger money-laundering legislation focused on the real estate industry, knowing that to do so could deal a heavy blow to his real estate business empire, proudly built on debt and substantially beholden To do so would mean financial suicide. He would be forced to smile and follow Putin's lead, no matter where it took this country. How did it come about that Trump Organization projects came to be financed with dirty money originating with international financial criminals from Russian, Ukraine, Kazakhstan, the former Soviet Republic of Georgia and other Eastern European and Central Asian sources? The Trump business empire was on the verge of collapse. In order to finance the project, the Trump Organization teamed up with two real estate development companies that had a direct pipeline to Russian, Eastern European and Central Asian money sources. While Trump's partners handled sales of condo units within the hotel, Trump until 2014 held an 18% stake in the projects. Among the buyers whose funds thereby found their way to Trump was Viktor Khrapunov, a former Kazakh energy minister alleged in federal court to have been engaged in a money laundering scheme at the time. Another Trump real estate development project that specifically targeted Russian and other offshore investors was the Trump Towers project at Sunny Isles Beach, Fla. Investigative reporters with the Miami Herald were able to penetrate through the "corporate veil" of 13 Trump Towers ownership companies, and found that the beneficial owners of the... Keywords: arrested, bribery, laundering, criminals, fraud, dirty money, money laundering, criminal, illegal Original URL: http://www.nydailynews.com/opinion/kenneth-f-mccallion-trump-real-estate-built-corruption-article-1.2856797

Trump accused of tax fraud in Mexico	01/11/2016	Adverse Media	Summary: A Mexican government official filed a federal criminal tax fraud complaint Friday against Donald Trump in Tijuana, Mexico, related to Trump Ocean Resort, a real estate project that folded in 2009. Trump's presidential campaign did not immediately respond to a request for comment. Trump and his partners, Los Angeles-based developer Irongate Wilshire and Mexican company P.B. Impulsos, allegedly collected $32.5 million from customers before giving up on the project. Trump Ocean Resort started selling the properties in 2006, but folded before construction had started in 2009 after the housing crash. Martínez singled out Trump in the complaint, saying the slow start in construction evidenced tax fraud "by Mr. Donald Trump against the Mexican state because beyond defrauding investors he also committed fraud by not paying taxes in Mexico for the mercantile operations he took part in." It's not clear if Trump received any of the $32.5 million that was collected, or if he did, how much he received. But purchasers said Trump gave the impression that he was personally involved in the project. The brochure for the resort included a picture of Trump and quoted him as saying it would be "the most spectacular place in all of Mexico," according to the LA Times. The Trump Ocean Resort is not the only Mexican deal that has gone south for the billionaire developer. In 2007, Trump struck a deal to take his Miss Universe pageant to Mexico, and properties on the Mayan Riviera were set as collateral. After that deal went sour, Trump allegedly won the land in arbitration, but was unable to collect. Years later, Trump tweeted about that case, saying, "don't do business with Mexico!" Trump has proposed the renegotiation or cancellation of the North American Free Trade Agreement and to build a wall on the border with Mexico. He has also called for a 35 percent tariff on products made by American companies in Mexico. Keywords: N/A Original URL: http://thehill.com/latino/303691-trump-accused-of-tax-fraud-in-mexico

Two experts say Donald Trump should be investigated for criminal tax evasion	01/11/2016	Adverse Media	Summary: Donald Trump has, for years, served as president of a charitable foundation that, though named after himself, is not financed with contributions made out of his own pocket. Instead, contributions mostly seem to come from a range of Trump's business partners, allowing him to parlay celebrity into securing credit for charity work. Some of the money seems to flow back into Trump's pockets through his businesses, while other funds are used to punish his political enemies or try to gain new friends in the conservative movement. It spent $20,000 on a portrait of Donald Trump, for example, and $12,000 on buying Trump an autographed Tim Tebow helmet. When Trump's Mar-a-Lago club racked up $120,000 in fines from the town of Palm Beach, Florida for violating a local ordinance regarding the height of flagpoles, Trump eventually settled the dispute by agreeing to a $100,000 donation to a veterans' charity — and then had his foundation rather than the club pay the tab. The largest gift the foundation ever made was a $264,631 bequest that was used to renovate a fountain outside the windows of Trump's Plaza Hotel. He's also used the charity for some surprisingly small-time frauds. Various aspects of this almost certainly violate the laws governing charities (he's already been sanctioned by the state of New York), but several experts are also raising the question of whether Trump is guilty of criminal tax evasion. This is a difficult charge to prove, but the law requires the government to demonstrate knowledge and intent which means that scofflaws can often get off by pleading ignorance. The first is that as the Huffington Post's Christina Wilkie originally reported before the Washington Post's David Fahrenthold added much more detail, it certainly looks like Trump was having people write checks to his foundation as a means of paying him for his work. All told, Trump seems to have directed over $2 million in donations to his charity. Had Trump followed the precedent of the past 30-40 years worth of presidents and released his tax returns to the public, we could see if he followed the rule. He has not done so, and his campaign has been dodgy about answering reporters' questions as to whether he reported income correctly. "There's been no intent, in any way, to go against any applicable rules, laws, and regulations," Trump senior advisor Boris Epshteyn told Fahrenthold. But it appears... Keywords: guilty, criminal, tax evasion Original URL: http://www.vox.com/policy-and-politics/2016/10/31/13474280/trump-foundation-criminal-charges

Brazil prosecutor says Trump franchise may have benefited from corruption	31/10/2016	Adverse Media	Summary: A Brazilian prosecutor investigating potentially corrupt investments made by state pension funds said the real estate run by Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump appears to have benefited "suspiciously" from a massive redevelopment of Rio de Janeiro's port ahead of the Olympics. The structuring of the Porto Maravilha deal "favored, in a suspicious way, the Trump Organization economic group", among others, Lopes said. A senior executive involved in the Trump Towers Rio dismissed the prosecutor's charge as baseless. "Any allegations that the Porto Maravilha Investment Fund of Caixa Econômica Federal has favored in a suspicious way the Trump Organization economic group are completely unfounded," the executive, who asked not to be named, said by email. Not long after plans for the towers were first announced, Donald Trump tweeted in January 2013: "The Trump Organization is going revolutionize Rio de Janeiro's downtown port area with Trump Towers. Two of the five Trump Towers were supposed to be ready by the Olympics, but ground has yet to be broken. Trump Towers Rio on its website claims it is the first project in Brazil to bear the name of the U.S. real estate magnate and the largest urban office development in the BRICS group of leading emerging market countries. Trump Accused of $32 Million Fraud in Unbuilt Resort in Mexico	25/10/2016	Adverse Media	Summary: Donald Trump, the man who launched his campaign to reach the White House by accusing Mexicans of being criminals, is facing accusations of major fraud concerning a luxury resort development in Mexico that bilked investors out of US$32 million, a report from La Jornada revealed Sunday. RELATED: Union Plans 'Taco Truck' Protest of Trump's Nevada Hotel In response, Trump — now the Republican candidate for the U.S. presidency — said that he merely licensed his name to the project, as he has in many other real estate projects. Investors said the business arrangement, which saw Trump merely license his name, was only revealed when the project began to run into financial trouble and accused the mogul of washing his hands of the issue. The revelation is unlikely to affect Trump's already low standing among Mexicans or Latinos in the U.S. but it serves to undermine his claims of business acumen. Keywords: criminals Original URL: http://www.telesurtv.net/english/news/Trump-Accused-of-32-Million-Fraud-in-Unbuilt-Resort-in-Mexico-20161023-0016.html

Trump's 1995 Tax Records Suggest No Federal Taxes For 18 Years: New York Times	04/10/2016	Adverse Media	Summary: Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump declared a $916 million loss on his 1995 income tax returns and the large tax deduction may have allowed him to avoid paying federal income taxes for up to 18 years, the New York Times reported on Saturday. The Trump campaign, in a statement responding to the Times report, said that the tax document was obtained illegally and that the New York Times is operating as an extension of the presidential campaign of Democratic rival Hillary Clinton. The Times said it had obtained Trump's 1995 tax records and that they showed he received the large tax benefits from financial deals that went bad in the early 1990s. The newspaper said that tax experts it hired to analyze Trump's records said tax rules which are especially advantageous to wealthy filers would have let Trump use his $916 million loss to cancel out an equivalent amount of taxable income over an 18-year period. The Times said that although Trump's taxable income in subsequent years is as yet unknown, a $916 million loss in 1995 would have been large enough to wipe out more than $50 million a year in taxable income over 18 years. Trump has declined to release his tax records, unlike previous presidential nominees in modern history, saying his taxes are under a federal audit. Experts say he could still release them publicly if he wished. "Mr. Trump is a highly-skilled businessman who has a fiduciary responsibility to his business, his family and his employees to pay no more tax than legally required," the Trump campaign statement said. "That being said, Mr. Trump has paid hundreds of millions of dollars in property taxes, sales and excise taxes, real estate taxes, city taxes, state taxes, employee taxes and federal taxes, along with very substantial charitable contributions," it said. Keywords: N/A Original URL: http://www.huffingtonpost.com/entry/trump-tax-bombshell-may-not-have-paid-for-18-years_us_57f07866e4b082aad9bbadad
